

Natomas Charter School

Writer's Guide

Table of Contents

I. Formatting Basics 1

- A. Author/Assignment Information 1
- B. Bindings/Covers 1
- C. Cover Pages 1
- D. Font 1
- E. Graphics 1
- F. Indenting and Spacing 1
- G. Line-Spacing 1
- H. Margins 1
- I. Paper 1
- J. Title 2
- K. Type Size 2

II. Quoting Sources and Avoiding Plagiarism 2

- A. When You Need to Cite a Source 4
- B. Quoting a Source 4
- C. Paraphrasing a Source 5
- D. Integrating Quotes into Your Paper 6
- E. Modifying Quotes to Fit Context 6

III. Citations Within the Paper 7

A guide for writing parenthetical citations.

IV. The Works Cited Page 8

- A. Formatting the Works Cited Page 8
- B. Basic Rules for Works Cited Citations 8
- C. Sample Works Cited Page Entries 9
 - 1. Books 9
 - 2. Periodicals 10
 - 3. Electronic Sources (Internet) 10
 - 4. Miscellaneous Sources 11

V. Works Cited for this Writer's Guide 13

VI. Sample Essay

I. FORMATTING BASICS

Although you will be asked to complete many different writing tasks at Natomas Charter School, there are certain basic principles of formatting (setting up your paper) that apply to all forms of writing. Unless specifically told otherwise by your instructor, all writing assignments should meet the following basic M.L.A. formatting requirements:

A. Author/Assignment Information

All written assignments should include the following information: your name, subject/period, and date. This information should be at the top of the first page, double-spaced, and aligned to the left side. Example:

William K. Miller
Mr. Pollard
U.S. History/Period 2
13 May 2010

B. Bindings/Covers

No report binders or covers should be used unless specifically required by the teacher. All papers should be stapled once in the upper left-hand corner.

C. Font

Papers should be written in an easily readable font (character style). While it may look nice to use fancy fonts (such as Brush Script or Impact), they are hard on the reader's eyes; therefore, you must use true-type fonts such as Times New Roman or Cambria. Furthermore, all papers must be printed in black ink only.

D. Graphics

In general, graphics (such as clip art, scanned images, downloaded images, etc.) should not be included in written assignments unless they are directly referred to in the paper; in other words, graphics should never be included merely to make an assignment "pretty." If graphics are to be included, they should be placed in an appendix at the end of the paper.

E. Indenting and Spacing

The first sentence of all paragraphs should be indented $\frac{1}{2}$ inch (1 tab). All punctuation (periods, commas, colons, semicolons, etc.) should be followed by one space before the next word begins.

F. Line-spacing

All typed papers must be double-spaced, including blocked quotes (see III, A), the works cited page, and author/assignment information.

G. Margins

Unless otherwise specified, all papers should have one-inch margins all around (left, right, top and bottom). The header should be $\frac{1}{2}$ inch from the top of the page.

H. Paper

All assignments must be printed on standard 8.5" x 11" white paper.

I. Title

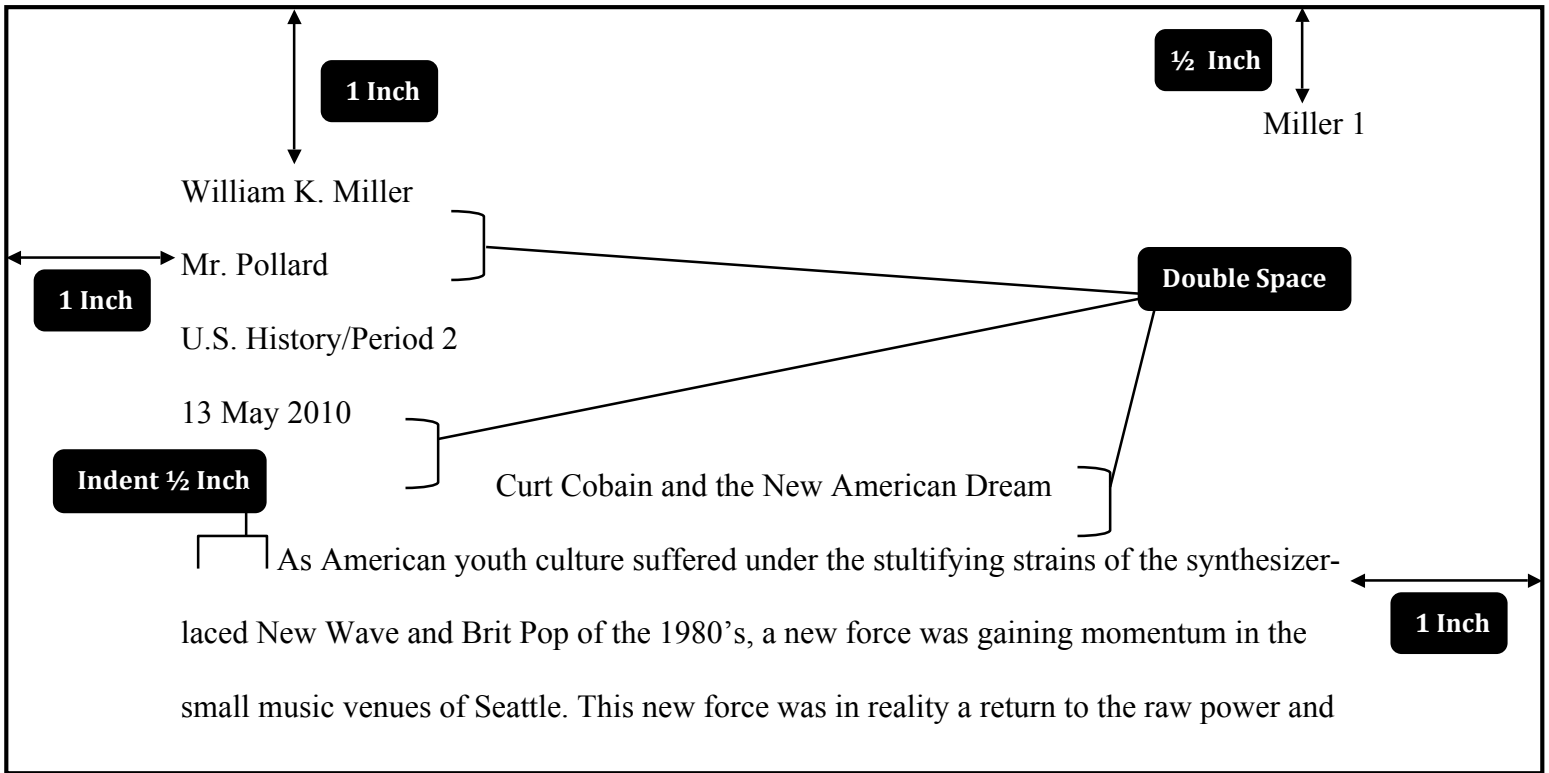

All papers should include a title. This should be centered above the first body paragraph. The title should be no larger than 12-point type size, and should be no more than two lines long. Titles should not be underlined, and should not be the same as the subject of your paper (for example, if you are writing a paper about Romeo and Juliet, you should not entitle your paper "Romeo and Juliet"—obviously, that title has already been used).

J. Type Size

All papers must be printed in 12-point type size. This should be consistent throughout the body of the paper. (Note: This guide is printed primarily in 10-point to save paper.)

Sample Title Page with Proper Spacing:

II. QUOTING SOURCES AND AVOIDING PLAGIARISM

Nearly every written assignment you undertake will require (or at least encourage) research of one kind or another (ranging from formal, library-style research, to informal cultural literacy). Please be aware that research conducted via the Internet falls under the same rules! It is never allowable to simply copy and paste information without proper citation! Incorporating research into your written work correctly can be a difficult and confusing task; furthermore, using research incorrectly can lead to the serious academic offense of plagiarism, and result in disciplinary action. The NCS-PFAA Student Handbook definition of plagiarism:

Simply stated, plagiarism is the "taking of others' thoughts or words without due acknowledgment" (Random House Handbook). This definition is applied to both published and unpublished material. When borrowing any idea or phrases of more than three words, appropriate documentation must be offered.

What follows are the basic guidelines you need to observe in order to use information correctly, and avoid plagiarism.

A. When you need to Cite a Source

When you use facts or ideas from the works of other writers (including information found on the Internet), you must cite the sources of your information—if you fail to do this, you will be guilty of plagiarism. Types of information whose sources must be cited generally fall into one of two categories:

- ✓ Statistics (i.e., sales of Nirvana’s Nevermind compact disc; percentage of handgun owners in California; comparative SAT scores).
- ✓ Ideas/Interpretations (i.e., a literary critic’s interpretation of a poem; a social commentator’s ideas on gun control; a historian’s interpretation of the Civil Rights movement).

It is important to understand that you must cite the source of any idea you use that is not your own, even if you don’t directly quote from that source! The only exception to this rule is that you do not need to provide citations for information that is common knowledge. A few examples of statistics/ideas/interpretations that would qualify as “common knowledge” are:

| | |
|--|---|
| Examples of Information that DOES NOT NEED TO BE CITED: | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ Barry Bonds hit 73 homeruns in 2001. ➤ The Civil War began in 1861 and ended in 1865. ➤ California was admitted to the Union in 1850. ➤ The Hundred Years War was between England and France. ➤ Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., fought for Civil Rights. ➤ Romeo and Juliet is one of the most well known plays in the English language. ➤ Gravity causes things to fall. |
|--|---|

In general, if all sources have the exact same information, it is considered common knowledge, and therefore does not need to be cited.

B. Quoting a Source

To quote means to use the exact words. As a general rule, you should only quote directly from a source if:

- ✓ The words of the original are especially memorable.
- ✓ Paraphrasing would lose the meaning of the words.

For example, you would probably not paraphrase Hamlet’s soliloquy (“To be, or not to be: that is the question”) for both of the reasons listed above. Similarly, if referring to Lincoln’s Gettysburg Address (“Four-score and seven years ago...”), it would be appropriate to quote directly from the speech.

On the other hand, it is not necessary to quote statistics directly—instead, statistics should generally be paraphrased. For example, you would not quote the following statistic from the 2000 Census of the United States directly:

Between 1990 and 2000, 538 households surpassed $1 billion in net-worth, while 121 households saw their fortunes slip below the $1 billion threshold.

Such a statement would best be paraphrased, as in the following example:

According to statistics released by the U.S. Census Bureau in 2002, more than 500 American families became billionaires, while less than a quarter of that number fell out of the elite $1 billion club (2000 Census 58).

C. Paraphrasing a Source

To paraphrase means to restate something in your own words. The following example of paraphrasing is taken from the Writing Tutorial Services of Indiana University (www.indiana.edu/~wts/wts/plagiarism.html):

| | |
|---|--|
| Here is the ORIGINAL text, from page 1 of Lizzie Borden: A Case Book of Family and Crime in the 1890s by Joyce Williams et al.: The rise of industry, the growth of cities, and the expansion of the population were the three great developments of late nineteenth century American history. As new, larger, steam-powered factories became a feature of the American landscape in the East, they transformed farm hands into industrial laborers, and provided jobs for a rising tide of immigrants. With industry came urbanization and the growth of large cities (like Fall River, Massachusetts, where the Bordens lived), which became the centers of production as well as of commerce and trade. | |
| Here is an ACCEPTABLE paraphrase that is not plagiarism: Fall River, where the Borden family lived, was typical of northeastern industrial cities of the nineteenth century. Steam powered production had shifted labor from agriculture to manufacturing, and as immigrants arrived in the US, they found work in these new factories. As a result, populations grew, and large urban areas arose. Fall River was one of these manufacturing and commercial centers (Williams 1). Why is this passage acceptable? This is acceptable paraphrasing because the writer: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Accurately relays the information in the original 2. Uses her own words. 3. Lets her reader know the source of her information. | Here is an UNACCEPTABLE paraphrase that is plagiarism: The increase of industry, the growth of cities, and the explosion of the population were three large factors of nineteenth century America. As steam-driven companies became more visible in the eastern part of the country, they changed farm hands into factory workers and provided jobs for the large wave of immigrants. With industry came the growth of large cities like Fall River where the Bordens lived, which turned into centers of commerce and trade as well as production. What makes this passage plagiarism? The preceding passage is considered plagiarism for two reasons: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. The writer has only changed around a few words and phrases, or changed the order of the original sentences. 2. The writer has failed to cite a source for any of the ideas or facts. If you do either of these things, you are plagiarizing! NOTE: This paragraph is also problematic because it changes the sense of several sentences (for example, "steam-driven companies" in sentence two misses the original's emphasis on factories). |

D. Integrating Quotes into Your Paper

Using quotes can be a difficult task; however, there are some simple guidelines to help you with integrating quotes into your own sentences. First, quotes should not stand-alone or just drop out of the sky. Even though you as the writer are presenting someone else's ideas, you need to integrate a quote into your own sentence. Also, keep in mind that because quotations are someone else's ideas you should follow a quote with at least a sentence of your own which explains or suggests the importance of the quote. Following are the four main ways to insert quotes into your work:

1. As Kurt Cobain's mother wrote, "Kurt practiced his screaming and his guitar playing for hours every day" (Smith 9).
2. Kurt Cobain's mother wrote, "Kurt practiced his screaming and his guitar playing for hours every day" (Smith 9).
3. As a young boy, Kurt Cobain was extremely dedicated: "Kurt practiced his screaming and his guitar playing for hours every day" (Smith 9).
4. Kurt Cobain "practiced his screaming and his guitar playing for hours every day" (Smith 9).

Keep in mind that if your quotation is more than four lines of text, it should still be double-spaced and indented one inch (two tabs). This is called a block quote. If this is the case, you do not need to use quotation marks. Example:

Kurt Cobain's guitar playing began early in his life. His mother wrote:

Kurt practiced his screaming and his guitar playing for hours every day. Actually, our neighbors really disliked his playing and his voice. One of them was never quite sure if Kurt's music was music at all. One day this neighbor called the police and reported an electrical explosion and terrible noise. It turned out that Kurt was just practicing a new song (Smith 9).

E. Modifying Quotes to Fit Context

A quote may be modified in order to achieve one of the following goals:

- ✓ To explain or comment on the quote.
- ✓ To clarify the use of a pronoun (in other words, to identify the speaker or subject)
- ✓ To adjust for tense variations.

The modification should appear in square [brackets]. Examples:

He claimed he could provide "hundreds of examples [of court decisions] to illustrate the historical tensions between church and state" (Smith 142).

Milton's Satan speaks of his "study [pursuit] of revenge" (Jones 37).

The author clearly shows this aspect of the character's personality when she writes, "Barbara took his [Jason's] hand and squeezed as though she would never let go" (Brown 12).

III. CITATIONS WITHIN THE PAPER (PARENTHETICAL CITATIONS)

Whenever you integrate someone else's ideas into your paper (either through paraphrasing or quoting) you need to provide two types of documentation:

- ✓ Directly following the quote or paraphrase in the paper, you need to provide the author's name (or, if there is no author, use enough of the title of the work to distinguish it from other sources on your Works Cited page) and the page number (or paragraph number) in a parenthetical citation. For guidelines on parenthetical citation see below.
- ✓ For each outside source used in your paper you need to provide a complete listing of the source information in a Works Cited Page. For guidelines on a works cited page see section four.

Except for rare occasions, you need to provide the citation for a quote within the paper itself. The guidelines that follow are based on Modern Language Association or M.L.A. format. If you are seeking assistance for a type of source that is not listed here, try one of the following:

- ✓ Ask your teacher for help.
- ✓ Consult a complete 2009 edition of the M.L.A. guide, available at libraries or bookstores.
- ✓ Seek assistance online at the Purdue University Online Writing Lab.
<http://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/747/01/>

Generally, the citation should include the author's last name and the page number(s) (or paragraph numbers, if the page number is unavailable) of the quote. The citation or reference goes inside parenthesis, after the quotation marks and before the period concluding the sentence. Example:

As Kurt Cobain's mother wrote, "Kurt practiced his screaming and his guitar playing for hours every Day"
(Smith 9).

When using more than one work by the same author, include a short form of the title (italicized or underlined) along with the author's name. Example:

As Kurt Cobain's mother wrote, "Kurt practiced his screaming and his guitar playing for hours every Day"
(Smith, Cobain's Past 9).

Example for a quotation that is four or more lines of text:

Kurt Cobain's guitar playing began early in his life. His mother wrote that:

Kurt practiced his screaming and his guitar playing for hours every day. Actually, our neighbors really disliked his playing and his voice. One of them was never quite sure if Kurt's music was music at all. One day this neighbor called the police and reported an electrical explosion and terrible noise. It turned out that Kurt was just practicing a new song (Smith 9).

A WEBSITE WITH AN AUTHOR

Most websites have the author listed. If this is the case include the author's name and the page or paragraph number of the quote in your parenthetical reference. Example:

Ex-Nirvana drummer Dave Grohl claimed on his web page that playing with Cobain "taught him about fame, fortune, and the cost of rock and roll" (Grohl).

Many types of works do not have authors or page numbers. These include some films, TV series, advertisements and some electronic sources. For these works simply place an abbreviated version of the title in the parenthesis and include a paragraph number or page number if available. This will indicate to the reader where to find the complete reference in the works cited page. Examples:

A WEBSITE WITHOUT AN AUTHOR:

A fan of Cobain's once claimed she saw him, "crying over a burger at Burger King because he was so happy to have it his way" ("Rock Encounters").

A TELEVISION SHOW:

Cobain once made a guest appearance on the X-Files and stated, "I wrote 'Smells Like Teen Spirit' after I had been abducted by aliens who tested deodorants on me" ("X-Files").

If the author's name is identified in your sentence you do not need to repeat it in your citation; instead just include the page number. Example:

In his biography of Cobain, Larry Smith argued "Cobain's genius existed in his ability to connect his personal struggle with depression to the common teenager's feelings of angst" (90).

IV. THE WORKS CITED PAGE

In addition to citing your sources inside the text of your paper, you also need to provide a "Works Cited" page at the end of your paper.

A. Formatting the "Works Cited" Page

- Your Works Cited page should begin on a separate page from your essay or paper text. Title this page Works Cited. The title should have no quotation marks or underlining and should be centered at the top of the page.
- A works cited page is an alphabetical listing (based on the last name of the authors) of all the different works you have used in your paper. If the author is unknown, the listing should be alphabetized by the title of the work.
- The first line of a works cited entry is flush against the left margin, and the following lines of that entry are indented one tab (5 spaces).
- The entire Works Cited page should be double-spaced.

B. Basic Rules for "Works Cited" Page Citations

- Authors should be listed last name first. If there is more than one author, the entry should begin with the name of the first author listed on the title page of the work, last name first. The remaining authors are listed in normal order.
- If no author is given for a work, alphabetize and begin the entry with the title of the work.
- Italicize or underline titles of books, journals, magazines, newspapers, and films.

- Use quotation marks around the titles of articles in journals, magazines, and newspapers. Also, use quotation marks for the titles of short stories, book chapters, poems, and songs.
- List page numbers in an efficient manner. If you make reference to pages 250 through 275 in a book, list the page numbers as pages 250-75.
- Indicate the “medium” of the source. These mediums include Print (for books, magazines, and journals), Web (for Internet sources), Film, DVD, and CD-ROM.

C. SAMPLE WORKS CITED PAGE ENTRIES

What follows is a listing of the proper means to cite common sources of information in a works cited page. Each type of work that you need to provide references to has a different method of citation. The guide that follows is based on Modern Language Association (M.L.A.) format. If you are seeking assistance for a type of source that is not listed here, try one of the following:

- ✓ Ask your teacher for help.
- ✓ Consult a complete 2009 edition of the M.L.A. guide, available at libraries or bookstores.
- ✓ Seek assistance online at the Purdue University Online Writing Lab.
<http://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/747/01/>

1. BOOKS:

A works cited page for a book contains the following information:

- The author's full name, last name first, followed by a period and one space;
- The full title of the book, italicized or underlined, followed by a period and one space;
- The city of publication, followed by a colon and one space;
- The name of the publisher, followed by a comma and one space;
- The date of publication, followed by a period.
- The medium, followed by a period.

BOOK BY ONE AUTHOR:

Smith, Miles. Cobain's Past: He Always Smelled Like Teen Spirit. New York: Newsday Press, 1999. Print.

BOOK WITH TWO AUTHORS: This entry should begin with the name of the first author listed on the title page, last name first. The remaining authors are listed in normal order.

Love, Courtney, and William Shakespeare. The Nirvana in Nirvana's Music. London: Fictional Press, 2000. Print.

BOOK WITH THREE OR MORE AUTHORS: This entry should begin with the name of the first author listed on the title page, last name first. The remaining authors are listed as et al.

Love, Courtney, et al. The Nirvana in Nirvana's Music. London: Fictional Press, 2000. Print.

EDITED BOOK WITHOUT AN AUTHOR: This entry should begin with the name of the editor listed on the title page, last name first. The remaining information is listed in normal order.

Castro, Fidel, ed. The United States: A History. Havana: Socialist Press Books, 2001. Print.

EDITED BOOK WITH AN AUTHOR: This entry should begin with the name of the author, last name first. The title of the work is next, followed by the editor's name, with the first name of the editor listed first. The remaining information is listed in normal order.

Helms, Jesse. The United States Versus Cuba: 40 Years of Tension. Ed. Strom Thurmond. Washington: Congressional Press, 2000. Print.

MULTIPLE BOOKS BY THE SAME AUTHOR: If your works cited page includes more than one book by the same author, you should use three dashes followed by a period and one space (—.) in the place of the author's name in each entry after the first. The books should be listed in alphabetical order arranged by the first main word in the work's title.

Smith, Miles. Cobain's Past: He Always Smelled of Teen Spirit. New York: Newsday Press, 1999. Print.
— . The Foo-Fighters: Nirvana Light or Grohl's Grunge? New York: Newsday Press, 2001. Print.

2. PERIODICALS: JOURNALS, MAGAZINES, AND NEWSPAPERS

A works cited page citation for a periodical contains the following information:

- The author's full name, last name first, followed by a period and one space,
- The full title of the article, in quotation marks followed by a period and one space,
- Publication information:
 - The title of the periodical, italicized or underlined, (omit any 'A', 'An', or 'The' from the beginning of the title) followed by one space,
 - The volume and/or issue number followed by one space,
 - The date of publication, followed by a colon and one space,
- The inclusive page numbers of the article followed by a period,
- The medium, followed by a period.

ARTICLE FROM A MAGAZINE OR JOURNAL:

Jackson, Michael. "Unimpressive Impressionism." Art Critic November 2000: 849-861. Print.

DAILY NEWSPAPER:

Starr, Kenneth. "Britney Aguilera Should Have Gone Through Music Program at Natomas Charter School." Sacramento Bee 24 March 2000: C3. Print.

3. ELECTRONIC SOURCES

A works cited page citation for an Internet or electronic source contains the following information:

- The author's or editor's full name (last name first) followed by a period and one space (if the website does not have a clear author or editor listed, then begin the entry with the title of the work and alphabetize it by the title);
- The full title of the work, in quotation marks followed by a period and one space;
- The name of the website (not the address), in italics, followed by a period and one space;
- The name of the publisher of the website (the organization that sponsors the website);

this information is often included in the "About" section of a website; if not available, write n.p.);

- The date of the work, copyright, or update followed by a period and one space (if no date is available, write n.d.);
- The medium, followed by a period and one space.
- The date you accessed the work followed by a period.

GENERIC WEBSITE EXAMPLE:

Editor, author, or compiler name (if available). Name of Site. Version number. Name of institution/ organization affiliated with the site (sponsor or publisher, if available), date of resource creation (if available). Medium of publication (Web.). Date of access.

A PROFESSIONAL WEBSITE:

Talese, Gay. "Bridging New York." pbs.org. 2002. Web. 22 July 2009.

A SCHOLARLY WEBSITE:

"Key Events in CIA's History." nmi.edu. University of North Michigan Political History Department, 1998. Web. 11 November 2008.

A PERSONAL WEBSITE:

Vain, Iamso. "Home Page." iamsovain.com. 7 July 2002. Web. 12 August 2008.

A PERSONAL EMAIL: For this entry you need to include the name of the sender of the email, the sender's email address, the title or subject line of the email, the date it was received, and indicate that it was an email.

Presley, Elvis. "RE: I am still alive." Message to Michael Jackson. 31 October 2001. Email.

CD ROM:

Monster, Cookie, ed. The New Sesame Street Cookie Cookbook. New York, Children's Television Press, 2001. CD-ROM.

NEWSPAPER OR PERIODICAL ARTICLE FROM AN ONLINE SOURCE: For this entry, provide the citation information you would for a print based newspaper or magazine article, and then indicate that the source was an online source and add the required information for an electronic source.

Wiegand, Steve. "Internet Medicine Trips Up Doctor." Sacramento Bee, 22 July 2002. Web. 23 July 2002.

4. MISCELLANEOUS SOURCES:

FILM: For this entry you need to include the title of the film (italicized or underlined), the director's name, the film's distributor, the date of the initial release, and the medium.

Star Wars. Dir. George Lucas. Universal, 1977. Film.

TELEVISION SHOW: For this entry you need to include the title of the episode, the title of the show, the network on which it appeared, date of original broadcast, and medium.

"The Blessing Way." The X-Files. Fox. WXIA, Atlanta. 19 Jul. 1998. Television.

SOUND RECORDING: For this entry you need to begin with the name of the individual whose work you are citing. If you are giving the title of the song, give the title in quotation marks. Then provide the title of the recording (italicized or underlined), the manufacturer of the recording, and the date of release.

U2, "MLK." The Unforgettable Fire. Island Records, 1984. CD.

A WORK OF VISUAL ART: For this entry begin with the name of the individual who created the work of art. Then give the title of the artwork (italicized or underlined), and the name and the location of the owner. If you viewed the work personally at the location of its owner (museum, personal collection, or gallery) then you need not provide any more information.

Sargent, John Singer. Venetian Doorway. Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York.

If you are referencing a photograph or duplication of the work in a text collection then you need to provide the complete information for that collection.

Sargent, John Singer. Venetian Doorway. Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York. Sargent Watercolors. By Donelson F. Hoopes. New York: Watson Press, 1976: 31. Print.

If you are referencing a photograph or duplication of the work from an Internet source then you need to provide the complete information for that collection.

De Kooning, William. Untitled. San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, San Francisco. "William de Kooning: Tracing the Figure." sfmoma.org. 2002. Web. 22 July 2007.

INTERVIEWS: For an interview you conducted personally, begin with the name of the person interviewed, last name first, followed by a period and one space. Then indicate personal interview, telephone interview, or email interview, followed by a comma; then give the date, followed by a period.

Silveira, William. Personal Interview. 4 Jan. 2001.

For an interview you read, heard, or saw, but did not conduct personally, begin with the name of the person interviewed, last name first, followed by a period and one space. Then provide the title if any (or "Interview" if not), along with the complete bibliographic information for the source of the interview and the date.

Garcia, Jerry. "A Man of His Time." Interview with Bob Spivak. Rolling Stone Nov. 1989: 13-17. Print.

Works Cited for this Writer's Guide

Aaron, Jane E. The Little Brown Compact Handbook. Boston: Pearson Custom Publishing, 2001. Print.

"Guide for Citing Electronic Sources at the Thacher School." Thacher School, 1995.

Web. 22 July 2002.

"Online Writing Lab." Purdue University, 1995-2002. Web. 4 Jan. 2010.

"Writing Tutorial Services Library." Indiana University, 1996. Web. 1 Aug. 2002.

Jeffriam Sillard

Ms. Povlsen

Government/Period 5

July 22, 2008

To Tuck or Not to Tuck

A folk balladeer once observed, "Oh the times, they are a-changin'" (Dylan), a sentiment that resonates as well today as it did in the 1960s. Struggles today, as then, often revolve around questions of propriety: when is it acceptable to change the rules by which people have lived for generations? Nowhere can this argument be seen more clearly than in the debate over shirttucking rules at the Performing & Fine Arts Academy. While both sides in the issue provide compelling arguments to support their cases, in the end it is clear that shirt-tucking rules should be enacted and enforced at PFAA in order to meet the greater needs of society as a whole.

Those in favor of shirt-tucking rules argue that school is a de facto workplace for the students, and that they should therefore be required to meet certain standards in dress and appearance, just as they would if they were employed by a bank or a law firm.

Furthermore, argue supporters, people who present a neat appearance are more likely to act in a civilized manner. According to social anthropologist Dr. Dean A. Lasher in his book Clothing and its Affect on Personality, studies indicate that the way a person dresses affects the way he interacts with those around him. Lasher writes, "A person wearing a red ball on his nose and shoes the size of small boats will almost invariably act like a clown."

Furthermore, Lasher contends, "people who always tuck in their shirts act kindly toward others, and score far higher on standardized tests" (154). Other supporters of shirt-tucking rules cite safety and health considerations. According to statistics compiled by the World Health Organization, untucked shirts accounted for more than two-thirds of the nearly 40,000 cases of accidental hangings in 1996 (17). Similarly, the American Medical Association has endorsed shirt-tucking rules in the grounds that those who leave their shirts untucked are five times more likely to suffer from pneumonia, flu and other sicknesses due to inadequate protection against the elements (87).

Despite the obvious credentials of those who argue in favor of shirt-tucking rules, many people argue against the need for such requirements. In her landmark study entitled Is Clothing Really Necessary?, psychologist Dr. Perky Emilanius argued that adolescents are by nature rebellious, and that they should be given innocuous outlets for rebellious behavior:

Leaving shirts untucked, shoes untied, zippers unzipped, and toenails unclipped is for many young adults the only means by which they can express their individuality. To deny them these simple acts of defiance would only push them toward overt acts of insubordination, such as not doing homework or, in extreme cases, listening to rap music (124).

Other opponents of shirt-tucking rules argue that making people tuck in their shirts infringes upon their basic right to freedom of expression, and claim that people should have the right “to leave their shirts untucked to the point where another person’s belly-button begins” (Holmes 2). Simpler arguments against shirt-tucking rules include the need for ventilation (on hot days it is sometimes necessary to let a little air in); wearing tight pants (having to tuck in a shirt makes them tighter); and covering buttocks (some believe that hanging a shirt over one’s buttocks hides it from view).

After careful consideration and reflection, it is clear that students should be required to tuck in their shirts while at school. Students must play their part--no matter how small—in making the learning environment more productive and conducive to intellectual growth. Tucking in their shirts makes students sit up straight in class and pay attention more closely to their teachers. Despite Emilanius's statements to the contrary, leaving one's shirt untucked is more a sign of slovenliness than rebellion. As Mr. Hand explained to Jeff Spicolli in Fast Times at Ridgemont High, "To be slovenly in the comfort of one's own home is one thing; to invade the hallowed halls of academia with a slovenly appearance and attitude only detracts from the educational process" (Fast Times). Although Holmes makes a compelling argument, his point is moot, since the Performing & Fine Arts Academy is a Charter School, and both parents and students voluntarily sign agreements stating that they will abide by the rules of the school (dress code and all).

While the foregoing opinion may not be popular with many people, it is important to distinguish between legitimate self-expression and the larger needs of society. When Dylan wrote about the changing times, he was referring to much larger issues (such as war and racism) than tucking in shirts. Change is not, in and of itself, necessarily a good thing; sometimes a line needs to be drawn between what is best for society and what is appealing to the individual. In the case of tucking in shirts while at school, it is clear that self-expression should acquiesce to the needs of society as a whole.

Works Cited

“Clothing and Death: A Comprehensive Study.” World Health Organization. 2002. 15 July, 2003. Web. 18 July 2008.

“Clothing and Disease: What You Don’t Wear Can Hurt You”. Journal of the American Medical Association Fall 1996: 84-92. Print.

Dylan, Bob. “The Times They Are A-Changin’.” The Times They Are A-Changin’. Columbia Records, 1964. CD.

Emilanius, Dr. Perky. Is Clothing Really Necessary? Dover: University of Delaware Press, 1997. Print.

Fast Times at Ridgemont High. Dir. Amy Heckerling. Universal Pictures, 1982. Film.

Holmes, Larry. “Tyson v. Holyfield: Majority Opinion.” Major Supreme Court Cases of the Twentieth Century. Court.com. 1999. Web. 17 July, 2008.

Lasher, Dr. Dean. Clothing and its Affects on Personality. Sacramento: Natomas Press, 2001. Print.